Airline pilot dies midflight

Co-pilots safely land jet carrying 247 passengers

Associated Press

NEWARK, N.J. The pilot of a Continental Airlines flight from Brussels to Newark died over the Atlantic Ocean on Thursday, but the jet landed safely with two co-pilots at the controls.

The 247 passengers aboard Flight 61 weren't told of the pilot's death and flight attendants continued serving snacks, though the crew did ask for the help of any doctors aboard. Several passengers approached the cockpit, including one doctor who told The Associated Press the pilot appeared to have suffered a heart attack.

The 60-year-old Newark-based pilot, with 32 years of service to the airline, is believed to have died of natural causes, said Kelly Cripe, a spokeswoman for the airline.

A relief pilot was on board during the flight and took the place of the deceased pilot, Cripe said. The Boeing 777 touched down on time just before noon at Newark Liberty International Airport.

"The flight continued safely with two pilots at the controls," Cripe said in a statement.

Dr. Julien Struyven, 72, a cardiologist and radiologist from Brussels who was aboard the flight, responded to the call for doctors, went to the cockpit and examined the pilot.

"He was not alive," Struyven said. There was "no chance at all" of saving him, he said.

Simon Shapiro, a passenger from Brooklyn, was unaware of the drama.

"I didn't hear anything or see anything," Shapiro said. "I was wondering why there were so many cops."

As a precaution, the airport's emergency crews were sent to meet the plane.

Passenger Kathleen Ledger, 45, of Bethlehem, Pa., said she learned about what happened when her cell phone rang after the plane landed.

"When we landed, my husband called me and told me," she said.

She said she was impressed with the way the flight crew handled themselves—including serving snacks during the crisis—and doesn't think passengers should have been informed of the death during the flight.

NOT THE FIRST TIME

In 2007, another Continental pilot died at the controls after becoming ill during a flight from Houston to Puerto Vallarta, Mexico. The plane landed safely with a co-pilot at the controls after being diverted to McAllen-Miller International Airport in southern Texas.

Your sign? It's in the stars

Remember how your parents warned you to choose your friends wisely? The whole company-you-keep, birds-of-a-feather spiel?

You may have tried to tune them out, but you know they were right.

It's a similar situation when it comes to your celebrity selections.

It doesn't matter whether you're following star antics as a true blue fan or a train-wreck watcher. Your interest—good or bad—fuels their fame.

Take the ludicrous longevity of Speidi, for example.

On Monday, Spencer and Heidi Pratt raged against the "Today" show's Al Roker because he (gasp) interviewed them with actual questions about their own idiotic actions on "I'm a Celebrity ... Get Me Out of Here!"

The videotaped truth proved too much for them to handle with Heidi warning womankind to steer clear of the revered weatherman.

Ironically, it's Heidi and husband Spencer we need to steer clear of.

According to my official Kyles Files celebri-scope, Speidi is the official Sign of the Self-Centered, and anyone attuned to their antics is co-signing for their commission of obnoxious, hypocritical acts and outrageous levels of greed.

Not to sound like some creepy old guy on Rush Street, but what's your celeb sign?

Brangelina: Sign of the Times

Flawed, but big-hearted people fall under the sign of Brangelina. Over time, these earnest humanitarians and evidently caring parents have shown the media and their fans that good people can do a bad thing and still have a lot to offer. Brangelina lovers may be more prone to charity, international travel and joining causes. They also may exhibit a proclivity toward bigger families and therefore must ward against going all Octo-mom on our asses.

Will Smith: Sign of Sunshine

Optimists are attracted to Will Smith. The gregarious rapper-turned-Hollywood heavyweight provides a positive example to his fans and is actually rewarded for his good-guy demeanor, last year earning the distinction of Forbes' top-earning actor of the year. Smith signees are likely eager to try new things, just as Smith turned his "Fresh Prince" fame into a reputation as both a box-office topper and serious actor ("The Pursuit of Happyness," "Ali" and "Seven Pounds.") The only thing they must avoid is the temptation to rap again.

Megan Fox: Sign of Smoking Self-Confidence

Fox followers embrace self-confidence and refuse to be judged solely on their appearance. After all, Fox is a smoking-hot starlet, but her candor differentiates her from other eye candy. Admittedly Fox slips up sometimes, including uttering the word "retard" and bagging on ScarJo in the June issue of Esquire. But she is a healthier alternative to other high-profile femme fatales, including the topless tweeting LiLos of the world.

Twitter wait

Whenever you see a line outside an Apple store—or an AT&T store—you know it must have something to do with the iPhone. I'll be waiting outside at 5 a.m. for mine, but will you? That's what we asked two sets of Twitter followers—those that follow @redeyechicago and those that follow @iptib. Here are some of the many responses. Connect online with RedEye all the time at twitter.com/redeyechicago. COMPILED BY SCOTT KLEINBERG.

@cyborganic

Pervasive device or not; the iPhone is good over time—not a single moment in time. So I'll wait a bit and not have a line.

@TaylorGerring

I can give you 399 reasons why I'll still be in bed.

@knitmeapony

Good lord no. Anyone who can't wait a day or even a month for a damn phone needs to reassess their priorities.

@shack072

I will not be waiting. I pre-ordered mine and will go into the Apple store around 12:00 p.m. to pick it up. :-D

@Cliff_Davis

Skipped the line and pre-ordered

@offering

I LOVE my hubby ... HE will be in line tomorrow at 5 am and I will relieve him around 7:30 am ... all to get ME a new iPhone :)

@ashleyrobin

I might drive by and laugh. It's just a selling tactic to get biz. Besides, I already have a camera.

@Zakiya

No need to wait in line 4 iPhone. Already have BlackBerry Bold.

@larrysullivan

Getting on a plane at 6 am. But I'm hoping to get one while in Hawaii! I'm such an Apple geek! HA!

@krueps

Ordered my iPhone 3G S, no waiting, no line. It'll arrive tomorrow in the morning :) I hope :o

Hot model: iPhone 3.0

By Scott Kleinberg

REDEYE

The new iPhone 3G S will hit stores Friday, but judging by the rave reviews it's been getting, it may not be there for long. If you're still on the fence, read. Here's what you need to know about the new iPhone. And if you want to know more—much, much more—follow RedEye's iPhone expert on Twitter at twitter.com/iptib. AP CONTRIBUTED.

Do I need a new iPhone?

Need is a strong word. But you may want one. The iPhone 3G S is faster than both previous iPhone models and, with a 32GB option, offers more storage than ever.

Hey, they look the same. What gives?

It's hard to tell them apart, but it's what's under the hood that matters. Apple says the S stands for speed—common consensus is that this is one fast iPhone—but it could also stand for stuff, as in lots of new stuff.

Oooh, stuff. What kind?

The digital camera is improved (3 megapixels with autofocus versus 2), there's now video recording, video editing, voice control, a compass, better battery life, a special coating that keeps the iPhone less smudgy and more.

Is smudgy a word?

Yes. Yes it is. Thanks for asking.

What's this I hear about new software? Is that enough?

In some cases, yes. The new iPhone 3.0 software works on all previous models as well as the new model. But certain features may not work on other models. In other words, your mileage may vary.

What does it cost?

Good question. If you are a qualified customer (new customer or at the right point in your current contract) it's $199 for the 16GB version and $299 for the 32GB. If you don't qualify, there are other pricing options. Go to apple.com/iphone for all the details.

And I heard there's a $99 iPhone!

You heard right. The current iPhone 3G in the 8GB capacity will be sold for $99.

What's all this I hear about AT&T changing its mind on pricing?

Long story short, customers who signed up for an iPhone 3G last year weren't eligible for the lowest pricing. But customers complained because they were early adopters and they felt they were being punished. On Wednesday, AT&T reversed course and said that all current customers who would otherwise qualify for the lowest price by September will qualify Friday. So if you thought you didn't qualify until August, you qualify now.

I'd love a green one. Can you hook me up?

Sorry. Just black and white.

Do I need to have AT&T to get an iPhone? I thought Verizon was getting it.

That was a rumor. AT&T has an exclusive contract for the iPhone.

Can I just walk into an Apple or AT&T store and pick one up?

It's first-come, first-served, unless you reserved one ahead of time. You also can order online and have it shipped directly to you.

Can I try your iPhone first before I decide?

No. Thanks for asking.

The hole left on the construction site for the now-tabled Spire project is collecting rainwater and is becoming an ideal breeding ground for mosquitoes.

BITE FRIGHT

Mosquito worries rise with the temperature

Chicago Tribune

Seen from a helicopter zipping along at 500 feet, the water-filled foundations of unfinished homes stuck out like red flags as potential mosquito breeding grounds.

So did a dozen murky green or brown swimming pools. The unchlorinated and unkept pools were once a telltale sign someone was on vacation, but now they often are caused by foreclosures or an effort to save money.

"It's not only an eyesore for your neighbor, but it can become a huge breeding spot for the whole neighborhood," said George Balis, an entomologist with Clarke Mosquito Control, based in Roselle, on a recent flight across the northwest suburbs.

An unforeseen consequence of the recession is exacerbation of the annual war on mosquitoes, which is well under way across the Chicago region. Don't be fooled by the cooler-than-normal spring, which so far has kept most mosquitoes at bay. The slapping is certain to start as soon as warmer weather arrives.

Although experts such as Balis say they can't predict how bad this summer's crop of blood-suckers will be, they agree the amount of rain in the last few weeks has provided favorable conditions for two common types of mosquitoes. They are the "floodwater" nuisance variety and the Culex mosquito that prefers stagnant water and can transmit the potentially deadly West Nile virus.

Clarke Mosquito Control has been taking to the air since early last month to seek out potential breeding grounds as well as to dump larvicides—poisons that kill mosquitoes in the larval stage. The insects die in the water before they become adults.

"The good thing about mosquito larvae is they're really easy to kill," said Pete McNeil, pilot of Clarke's Bell Jet Ranger helicopter.

By using a helicopter, Clarke can treat thousands of acres in a day, Balis said. The same area would take days or weeks to cover on the ground.

Clarke and other mosquito abatement groups also will take to the streets to spray storm drains, which often provide the stagnant water preferred by Culex mosquitoes. Experts recommended wearing repellent and making sure gutters are cleaned out.

Ilana Jackson and Jeremy Fierstien get married despite having swine flu. SUKIT SUBANEK-

SANTI/DURON STUDIO PHOTOGRAPHY

And the bride wore ... a mask?

Chicago Tribune

The Chicago couple got the jarring phone message less than 48 hours before they were scheduled to walk down the aisle.

"The doctor said: 'It's not going to be the wedding you wanted. You tested positive for swine flu. Give me a call if you have any questions,'" Jeremy Fierstien said with a chuckle Thursday, recalling the moment last week when his wedding plans encountered a slight hitch.

Fierstien and his fiancée, Ilana Jackson, both 26, had been concerned about the vomiting, achy limbs and burning fever that had taken hold of them. But they assumed the sickness would put only a slight damper on the wedding ceremony and reception planned Sunday at North Suburban Synagogue Beth El in Highland Park.

Shocked as they were, the couple decided to move forward with their plan after doctors assured them they wouldn't put their guests at serious risk.

The professional hairstylist and makeup artist Jackson, a graduate psychology student at Roosevelt University, had hired refused to touch her. So at the last minute she recruited a friend to help.

At the instruction of doctors, the bride and groom stayed 10 feet away from all guests at all times.

Instead of walking down the aisle, Jackson and Fierstien walked around the guests.

They couldn't dance.

And throughout the ceremony they wore surgical masks and latex gloves. So did some of the guests.

Nearly five days later, as they continue to recover in their Lakeview apartment, the couple can't help but marvel at how the wedding unfolded.

"Was it unfortunate? Yes. Disappointing? Yes," Jackson said. "But we've had a really good attitude about it."

» Police: Southwest Side teen who was fatally shot Wednesday night may have had an earlier spat with the shooter. Shawn Wilson, 16, was shot in the 3500 block of West 80th Street. He was to be a junior at Bogan High School.

» Northwest Side man who allegedly robbed a bank last week, and apologized as he left, was arrested Wednesday after depositing stolen, dye-stained cash into a personal account.

» A man convicted in a fatal carjacking was sentenced to 100 years in prison. Last February, a jury convicted Robert Clark, 46, of the 2004 murder of Leodis Norwood, 71, who was killed a few days after the death of his wife.

Sit ... stay ... and bring your dog

Want to dine with your pet? You're in luck at these 65 restaurants across the city

By Tracy Swartz | REDEYE

It's not quite the dog days of summer, but at least it's warm enough to lunch al fresco with your dog.

Sadly for Fido, though, there are few doggy dining options in the city. Only 65 restaurants in Chicago have designated dog-friendly dining areas, and most of these restaurants are concentrated on the North Side and in Wicker Park.

There are only two dog-friendly restaurants south of Roosevelt Road: Seven Ten in Hyde Park and Cafe Society on the Near South Side, according to city data.

"Downtown and entertainment districts are where a majority of outdoor cafes are," said Efrat Stein, spokeswoman for the city Department of Business Affairs and Consumer Protection. "It would make sense that a majority of those dog-friendly area licenses are there."

Only 14 of the city's 50 wards have dog-friendly restaurants. The 42nd ward, which encompasses the Loop, North Michigan Avenue, Streeterville, River North and the Gold Coast, leads the pack in number of restaurants allowed to accommodate Fido.

Since last year, the Department of Business Affairs and Consumer Protection has been issuing dog-friendly area licenses to restaurants that have outdoor dining areas accessible from the street, such as sidewalk cafes or outdoor patios. Dining areas that are not accessible from the street cannot allow dogs.

Under city rules, dogs can sit tableside with their owners outdoors, not indoors, and they can be served only water.

The exception: Businesses that sell or prepare food are required to allow guide dogs in public areas indoors and outdoors.

Two years ago, service animals were the only dogs allowed in restaurants. But some restaurants nevertheless catered to dogs—until the city health department cracked down with $500 fines.

The City Council passed the dog-friendly ordinance in 2007, and the city started issuing licenses to restaurants in 2008. Last year, the city issued 57 dog-friendly licenses, which cost $450 each and can be renewed every two years.

The South Water Kitchen in the Loop got its dog-friendly license this year, assistant general manager David Friday said. The restaurant, adjacent to Hotel Monaco, allows hotel guests and other patrons to bring their dogs all day Saturday and Sunday, and after 2 p.m. on weekdays so the dogs don't interfere with the noontime business lunch rush, Friday said.

The restaurant has seen six doggy customers so far, he said.

"There are so many people living in Chicago who have pets that really don't have a place to go and dine with their pets on the weekend," Friday said. "We love to provide that service for them." TSWARTZ@TRIBUNE.COM

KEY TO THE MAP

● The map shows the 65 restaurants licensed by the Department of Business Affairs and Consumer Protection to allow dogs besides service animals.

BY THE RULES

Restaurants that allow dogs are kept on a short leash by the city. For some patrons, these rules may be a man's best friend.

- » Dogs may be permitted only in areas that are outside and accessible from the street.
- » Dogs are not permitted to be in, or travel through, any indoor portion of the retail food establishment or in any area where food is prepared with the exemption of service animals.
- » Dogs must be kept on leashes at all times.
- » Dogs must bear a rabies vaccination tag or other proof of a rabies vaccination.
- » Tables and chairs at which patrons with dogs are seated shall be cleaned and sanitized between seating of patrons.
- » Dogs may not be provided any food except for water.
- » Employees may not have contact with a dog.
- » Failure to comply may result in fines up to $1,000.

PETA wishes Obama hadn't swatted that fly

6 WASHINGTON Here's today's buzz.

People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals wants the flyswatter in chief to try taking a more humane attitude the next time he's bedeviled by a fly in the White House.

PETA is sending President Obama a Katcha Bug Humane Bug Catcher, a device that allows users to trap a house fly and then release it outside.

"We support compassion even for the most curious, smallest and least sympathetic animals," PETA spokesman Bruce Friedrich said

Wednesday. "We believe that people, where they can be compassionate, should be, for all animals."

During an interview for CNBC at the White House on Tuesday, a fly intruded on Obama's conversation with correspondent John Harwood.

"Get out of here," the president told the pesky insect. When it didn't, he waited for the fly to settle, put his hand up and then smacked it dead.

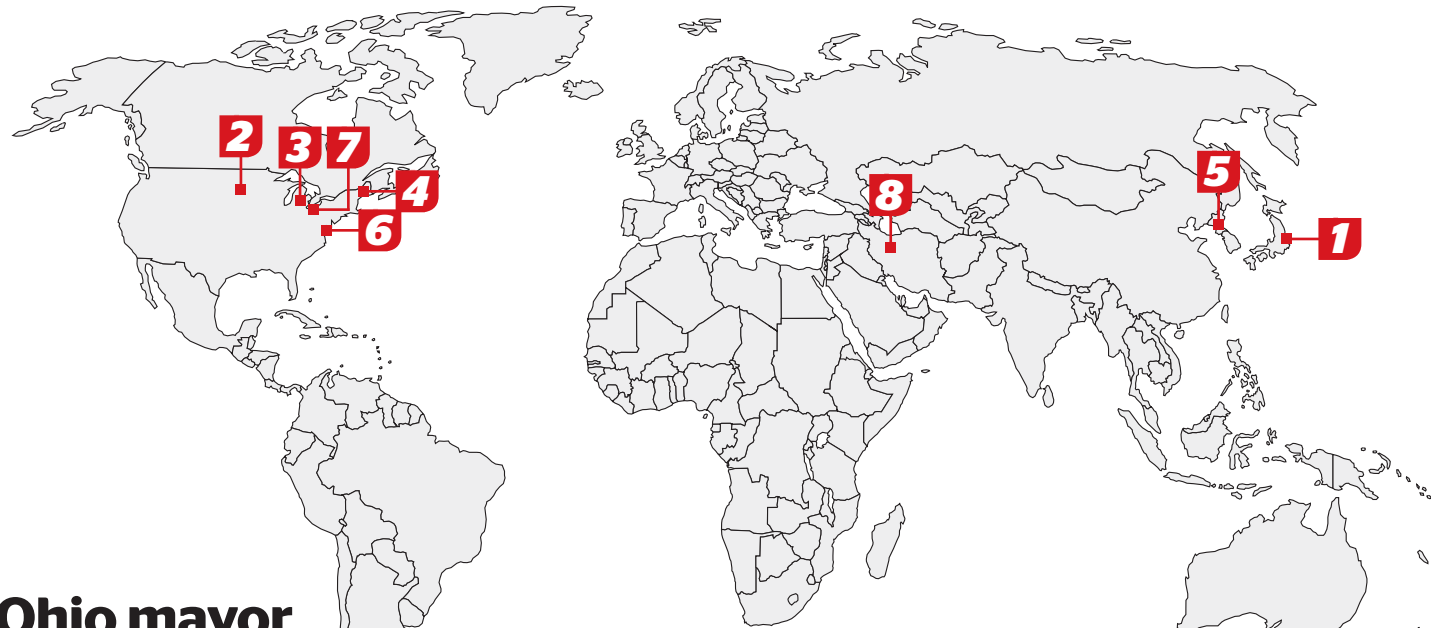

"Now, where were we?" Obama asked

Harwood. Then he added: "That was pretty impressive, wasn't it? I got the sucker."

Friedrich said PETA was pleased with Obama's voting record in the Senate on behalf of animal rights and noted that he has been outspoken against animal abuses.

Still, "swatting a fly on TV indicates he's not perfect," Friedrich said, "and we're happy to say that we wish he hadn't."

Deputy press secretary Josh Earnest said the White House has no comment on the matter.

Cubs players mob Alfonso Soriano on Thursday after he delivered the game-winning hit in the ninth inning to beat the White Sox 6-5. PHIL VELASQUEZ/TRIBUNE

Redeem team

Cubs players who had been slumping recently fueled Thursday's comeback win and might have spared themselves the wrath of manager Lou Piniella, who had warned of imminent "tough decisions." Here's how they did it. REDEYE

Geovany Soto

Last year's rookie of the year was this year's disappointment of the year (part of a long list of disappointments, actually). Geo had three homers heading into Thursday but hit the game-tying home run right after D-Lee's homer.

Derrek Lee

Fans had grown so tired of D-Lee's lack of clutch hitting and slugging (going into the game, he had seven homers, one more than not-so-sluggers Mike Fontenot and Ryan Theriot) that benching him in favor of Micah Hoffpauir had been suggested. He came through on Thursday with an RBI single in the sixth for the Cubs' first run and a three-run homer in the eighth to pull the Cubs to within a run.

Alfonso Soriano

The $136 million leadoff man was playing like $1.36 lead-footed man, prompting many to suggest he should be dropped in the hitting lineup. That's what a .225 batting average will do for ya. He briefly made fans forget all that with a walk-off RBI single scoring Reed Johnson.

Kevin Gregg

The man who replaced Kerry Wood as Cubs closer might as well have been Kyra Sedgwick of "The Closer." He wasn't winning over fans with his penchant for walking batters, giving up key hits and blowing saves. He pitched a scoreless ninth to allow the Cubs to win it in the end.

CUBS 6, WHITE SOX 5

CLASSIC COMEBACK

Five runs in final two innings means a split of two-game City Series

Associated Press

All is well in Cubbie nation. At least for a little while—maybe until Friday's game with the Indians and reality bites back.

In two innings Thursday, the Cubs put together a rally against the White Sox and emerged with a 6-5 victory that was one of their most dramatic wins of the season. It helped Cubs fans forget the team's offense had all but vanished in recent weeks.

"Sometimes when you are struggling, nothing works. I've been struggling for a couple of weeks," said Alfonso Soriano, who singled home the winning run in the ninth after Derrek Lee and Geovany Soto hit back-to-back homers in a four-run eighth to tie the game.

"I needed a game like this today and the team needed a game like this today," Soriano said. "Everybody can relax and come back tomorrow with new energy."

The late comeback gave the Cubs a two-game split of this rain-shortened set at Wrigley Field. They are 34-34 against the White Sox in interleague play.

Pinch-hitter Reed Johnson started the ninth with a single, moved up on a sacrifice and scored on Soriano's two-out single to right-center off Matt Thornton (4-2). Soriano was 14 for 102 and 0 for 15 before singling in his final two at-bats.

"Truthfully, he's too talented to have a valley as big as he's been in. You can have some peaks and valleys, but he's been in a gorge," Cubs manager Lou Piniella said. "Look, for us to be a good offensive team, we need Soriano to hit. Let's be perfectly clear about that."

The Cubs had managed just 10 runs in their previous six games, and Piniella has been pondering some major lineup changes that didn't come Thursday.

"We've been in an offensive funk, and to score some runs late off some really good pitchers is big for us," said Lee, who extended his hitting streak to 15 games. "To lose this game would have been tough."

Kevin Gregg (1-1) got the win with a scoreless ninth.

Reed Johnson celebrates with Ryan Theriot after scoring the game-winning run.

Tribune talks with another buyer

Chicago Tribune

Tribune Co., unhappy with the slow pace of negotiations to sell the Cubs to the Ricketts family, has reopened talks with another interested party who lost out to the Ricketts in the auction for the baseball team, according to two sources familiar with the matter.

The parent of the Chicago Tribune and RedEye has reached out to a group led by Marc Utay, managing partner of a New York private-equity firm who grew up in Glenview and attended New Trier West High School.

Utay's group, which also includes another private-equity investor named Leo Hindery, was one of three finalists in the bidding for the Cubs.

Utay declined comment.

Reuters first reported the talks with Utay.

Tribune Co. spokesman Gary Weitman said the media company is "assessing other alternatives" but would not confirm nor deny that it is talking again with the Utay group. He also said the company continues to have "an active dialogue with the Ricketts family with an eye toward reaching a definitive agreement."

"Our goal—and responsibility—is to pursue a transaction that is in the best interest of the company," Weitman said. "We won't comment on specifics of any potential transaction."

Dennis Culloton, a spokesman for the Ricketts family, confirmed that the family remains in discussions with Tribune Co. and that "things are moving very positively."

Party like it's 1979

The Cubs stink, the Sox stink, and they're rioting in the streets of Tehran.

It's like 1979 all over again. Quick, someone get some disco records for the next Sox homestand.

Thanks, I'll be here all week, and, sadly, for the rest of my life after that.

I couldn't get excited about the Crosstown Classic, a celebration of .500 baseball if there ever was one. I'm pitching a new reality TV show, though. It's called "I'm a Chicago Baseball Fan, Get Me Out of Here."

There couldn't have been better time for the Sammy Sosa story to break. I actually used to love Sammy—when he was with the White Sox. No one remembers. I do. He was skinny, muscular, could run like a deer. Sure, he swung at pitches over his head, but so what? I believe his nickname was "The Panther." He wanted to be Roberto Clemente—may have been, back then.

Of course, all bets were off with the Cubs. I was along for the ride, it was a big fun party, and I had a blast myself, so I can't complain. He just won't be going to Cooperstown, that's all.

As for the series, it's hard to get excited. Even the quotes are the same. Ozzie hates Wrigley Field! Whoa, stop the presses! It's been a year since he said that! Yawn.

It looks like the Cubs are waiting for Aramis Ramirez to come back before they start hitting. Me, I'm still waiting for Kosuke Fukudome to start hitting.

As for their manager, I'm seeing stares that are looking blanker and awkward pauses that are lasting longer. As for the Sox, I like the kids—except they can't play. Not yet, anyway.

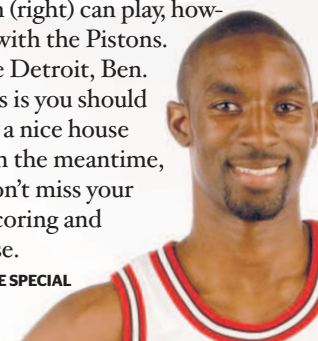

Ben Gordon (right) can play, however it will be with the Pistons. I hope you like Detroit, Ben. The good news is you should be able to find a nice house really cheap. In the meantime, I'm afraid I won't miss your inconsistent scoring and average defense.

TIGER'S TOUGH DAY

FARMINGDALE, N.Y. It was a morning of gray skies and colorful language for Tiger Woods.

The world's No. 1 player was none too pleased after hitting several wayward shots, including a hooked tee shot on No. 1 that nearly hit off a hospitality tent.

Woods saved par from a green-side bunker, but a double bogey on No. 5 led to a score of 1 over par through six holes.

"It was a slow day," Woods said. "It took [almost] 2 1/2 hours to play six holes."

His struggles on the fifth hole, a par 4 of 478 yards, must have made the morning seem even longer. Woods drove into the right rough and wedged out, leaving himself a 9-iron from 142 yards.

His effort came up short, settling in a front-left bunker.

"I hit it a little thin, and the wind knocked it down," he said.

A blast and two putts later, he was stuck with a double bogey.

Woods birdied the 408-yard sixth, though, going 3-wood, 6-iron to 15 feet.

The horn sounded with Woods on the seventh green, facing an 8-footer for par.

"I knew it was going to be a tough day," he said. "And it was."

Of the four players atop the leaderboard at 1-under par, Jeff Brehaut was the only one who saw more than four holes. He was on the par-3 third hole, his 12th hole of the round.

I'm almost glad the City Series is over—for now, at least. Now we can concentrate on even less meaningful interleague games. And by that I mean, "the Cubs and Sox going back to losing games—just not bragging rights." Here now, my TV picks.

MLB
Cubs vs. Cleveland

1:20 p.m. CSN

Hey, maybe the Cubs can do a little better playing a last-place team.

MLB
White Sox at Cincinnati

6:10 p.m. CSN

Saturday in Cincy is the star-studded Civil Rights Game, with Muhammad Ali & Co.

U.S. OPEN
Round 1, Part 2

9 a.m. ESPN

Rain-interrupted Round 1 resumes. Yes, rain doesn't delay just the Cubs and Sox.

OPENING SOON

The Terrace at Trump

401 N. Wabash Ave. 312-588-8030
Opening on Monday, this outdoor lounge perched on the Trump Tower's 16th floor terrace is your new post to drink pink—or at least that's what the staff, pimping a rosé-heavy wine list, would like you to think. Take in an impressive view of the Wrigley Building and Chicago River from practically wherever you sit, whether it be on L-shaped couches or bistro tables surrounding a lantern-lit flower garden. Nautically themed cocktails such as the Anchor's Aweigh, a cucumber-watermelon-mint concoction, sound thoroughly summery—and are expectedly pricey ($14). Enter through restaurant Sixteen and be prepared to wait your turn, as reservations are not accepted.

Clutch

459 N. Ogden Ave.
This casual bar and eatery aims to open June 25 near the intersection of Grand and Ogden Avenues. Giving a nod to the building's former lives as a gas station and then an auto detail shop, two garage doors open onto a 60-seat triangular beer garden. Owner Matthew Harris (who also runs Matilda in Lakeview) says they'll serve up simple drinks and fun fast food such as a super-cheesy cheeseburger and deep-fried hot dogs.

Cedar Hotel & Cafe

1112 N. State St.
The owners of River North club Manor and Wicker Park hang The Fifty/50 have combined forces to breathe new life into the prime-time patio space in front of the historic Cedar Hotel with this casual, come-as-you-are bar. Forget what you remember (or don't remember) from wild nights at Melvin B's and Cactus, the spots that used to operate here. From our latest peek in the window, the space has been completely gutted, walled with cedar planks and filled with new furniture.

RECENTLY OPENED

Square Bar & Grill

2849 W. Belmont Ave.
773-267-0123
Take your basic bar and grill, add a dash of whimsy and you've got Square, outfitted with colorful wooden wall hangings and a bar made from reclaimed bowling alley planks. We especially love its microbrew spin on the traditional bucket o' bottles, mixing picks such as Left Hand Brewery's Milk Stout and Metropolitan's Flywheel Lager ($20 for 5 bottles, available starting next week).

6 Degrees

1935 N. Damen Ave. 773-904-8812
Though this homey neighborhood bar opened earlier this month, the most noteworthy offerings just debuted, such as margaritas made "skinny" with agave nectar and a bloody mary dubbed "flaming" thanks to a kick from Sriracha chili sauce ($7-$9). On Wednesday, the bar revealed its much-anticipated take on the horseshoe, an open-faced sandwich made with a choice of meat topped with cheese sauce and fries ($12). Can't handle it? Try the half-size pony shoe ($8).

Dickinson's got drive

By Michael Hines

Rob Dickinson speculates his sophomore solo record just might drop early next year.

That's big news for the former front man of The Catherine Wheel, who has released only one album, 2005's "Fresh Wine for the Horses," since tuning solo in 2000. What's he been doing instead? In part, designing cars, a skill he studied in college.

"Music has taken on the level of a luxury for me, which has taken a little bit of the pressure off to be so consistent in my production," Dickinson said by phone recently from L.A., his adopted hometown. "I have the luxury to wait until I have something that I'm really proud of and that's really strong."

RedEye caught up with the English musician-slash-car designer recently and talked about his next record, lending his music to reality TV and his overactive sweat glands.

As a car guy, what's your favorite cruising music?

I've got an old 1969 911, and it's got the original crappy radio in the dashboard with the single speaker on top of the dashboard, which actually sounds kinda good. But it only sounds good if it's got classic rock coming out of it. I just turn on the classic rock station here in L.A. and listen to anything that's going on. It just feels right. You're in an old 1969 Porsche and you're listening to anything from Zeppelin to Blind Faith to Traffic and all that good stuff. It resonates. Old music coming out of an old speaker in an old car. That's where my life is at right now.

Rob Dickinson with Scott Lucas

When: 8 p.m. Sunday
Where: Schubas, 3159 N. Southport Ave.
Tickets: $14 at schubas.com

It sounds like your musical/automotive nirvana.

Yeah. Kind of dusty, you know? I'm a big fan of dusty music, and I'm a big fan of dusty cars. Music with a little bit of hair on it, with a little bit of dirt under its fingernails. If there's any direction that the next record is going, it's going to be influenced by that.

What else can you tell us?

I'm very pleased with the nature of the songs. It's going to be a stripped-down record. It's going to be free of unnecessary embellishment [which is] a little bit of a weakness for me. When I get in a studio, I tend to be like a kid in a candy store.

You've had songs appear on "Dog the Bounty Hunter" and "Deadliest Catch." Do you set out to get on reality TV?

Oh yeah, oh yeah. I desperately wanted that to happen. [Laughs]

What's your next reality show?

I don't know. ... If somebody wants to give me some money to use one of my songs, that's fine by me. That precious aspect of hanging on to the music has disappeared in my mind. As long as the music has been created in the right spirit, as far as I'm concerned it doesn't really matter where it gets used.

You're known for being a bit of a sweater on stage.

[Laughs] My rather unusual singing technique requires me to take huge lungfuls of breath, and I forget to actually breathe while I'm singing. It certainly feels like I'm connecting with myself if I'm giving it my all and spraying some spit and sweat all over the front row, but it's unavoidable. It just comes with the territory. That's all part of the intensity.

A&R

When: 9 p.m.

Tuesday

Where: Double Door, 1572 N. Milwaukee Ave.

Tickets: $7 at ticketmaster.com
Listen to A&R's "Chique Chick" at redeyechicago.com/chitunes

By Matt Kuhn

FOR REDEYE

Electro-pop duo A&R keeps fans dancing with club beats and hypnotizing mantras describing "Chique Chicks" and the upswings of party lust. Having just released their first EP, Rocko Rochee and Alex Kramer are taking their advanced studio production to music venues throughout the Windy City with a live band and guest MC's. RedEye recently chatted with the guys about their work.

What's the most interesting thing about the band?

AK: We have a "band crush" on Chicago-based DJ duo Roctap----. They are hot and their DJ sets are amazing, which makes it a win-win situation. If they ever remixed an A&R song it would be a win-win-win situation! [Laughs.]

How do you describe your sound?

AK: Electro-pop. It's got to make you move. You try not to make too many dance songs, but you give me that quarter note kick every chorus and I'm going to want to shake my ass to it and hopefully the crowd will too.

What makes your live show great?

AK: We just recently added a drummer, our friend Alex [Al-Hamdan], and that has just brought a tremendous amount of energy to the live show. The live drums just took it to a whole different level that seems to be well received.

RR: Also, with our live show I really try to emulate some of my performance idols like Mick Jagger, Steven Tyler and Adam Lazzara (of Taking Back Sunday). Those guys activate the audience and that's something we try to focus on—making sure it's just not us having fun, but the audience as well.

REYNOLDS ON ...

HIS NUDE SCENE WITH SANDRA BULLOCK:

"Oddly, I was the one who walked away pregnant."

ADVICE HE RECEIVED FROM BETTY WHITE:

"My first day, she leaned over and said, 'If you get in my light, I will [bleeping] cut you.' Deadpan."

ON HIS CHEMISTRY WITH BULLOCK:

"If this were a Tracy-Hepburn movie, I'm the role of Hepburn and she's the role of Tracy. I'm really the leading lady in this film. And she's the leading man."

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

Ryan Reynolds and Sandra Bullock in 'The Proposal' TOUCHSTONE PICTURES

Friends with benefits

By Miki Turner
FOR REDEYE

Ryan Reynolds really doesn't want anyone to take him seriously.

At least that's the impression the lanky, handsome Canadian gave during a recent L.A. news conference with his co-stars from the romantic comedy "The Proposal," which opens Friday.

Reynolds upstaged his leading ladies, Sandra Bullock and Betty White, with zingers that made their quick wits seem amateurish.

» Did he learn anything new about his longtime friend Bullock while filming their nude scene? "[It was] mostly birthmarks I learned about. There were a lot I wasn't aware of."

» What was it like working with comedy legend White? "I could see the movie without her."

He employed that same comedic flair in director Anne Fletcher's film. Reynolds plays Andrew, an abused executive assistant who experiences a reversal of fortune when his demanding boss from hell, Margaret (Bullock), is threatened with deportation to Canada. He agrees to marry her so she can obtain a green card only if she makes him an editor at the publishing house where they work.

With a suspicious INS agent on their tail, getting hitched isn't going to be that easy. Margaret has to travel to Alaska with Andrew to meet his family, who could be considered the Trumps of the Great Northwest, only more down-to-earth.

"The Proposal" could have been your basic cookie-cutter romantic comedy had the chemistry between Bullock and Reynolds not clicked. But their connection, whether they were fully clothed or in the buff, is nearly symphonic, according to the stars.

"Ryan and I could be doing a scene facing the camera and somehow our back-and-forth and our rhythm, we know when to stop, when to volley, when to make the sound," Bullock said. "It's like music."

Reynolds agrees.

"I always say that chemistry is something

FAST-PAISED*The Proposal (PG-13)

It's awfully depressing to walk out of a romantic comedy after having laughed only once or twice and having felt absolutely nothing. That's the case with "The Proposal," a painfully formulaic tale of a workaholic grouch (Sandra Bullock) lightening up after she spends time with the family of her assistant (Ryan Reynolds), whom she forces into getting engaged to prevent her from being deported. The lame setup and absent humor aren't the biggest culprits; it's that Bullock and Reynolds, perfectly likable on their own and longtime friends in real life, have no spark. Consequently, the most these two ever seem to want out of each other is close, platonic friendship.

MATT PAIS IS THE METROMIX MOVIES PRODUCER.

HOTTIE REYNOLDS SAYS HE SHARES GREAT CHEMISTRY WITH 'PROPOSAL' CO-STAR BULLOCK

that's impossible to manufacture. It's either there or it isn't," he said. "The fact that you're friends doesn't necessarily equate to great chemistry. We learned early on we had it, and I was so grateful for that. It's like one of the few magical things about film I think still exists."

Reynolds, who said he doesn't often "mythologize" his co-stars, credits their groove to Bullock's overall aura.

"Obviously, Sandy's a gorgeous woman," he said. "The reason why people fall in love with her is because she doesn't seem to know it in a way that other gorgeous people maybe would, and I think that's what makes her so accessible. That, and the ability to laugh at herself. You don't find that too often."

One of the most hilarious scenes between the pair happens about halfway through the movie, when the two naked actors run smack into each other and fall down in a compromising position.

They had to shoot the scene about a dozen times, Reynolds said, because of all the nervous laughter. Although both stars admitted that their protective pasties weren't all that effective as the day wore on, Reynolds said he eventually became comfortable in his own naked skin.

"You know you've, like, made a bad move or something—because you don't normally combine nudity with stunts, this isn't Cirque de Soleil porn, it's a movie," Reynolds said. "You have these scenes where you slam into each other and fall onto the ground. I would always know when something popped out wrong because the cameraman would go, 'Oh!' By hour four, I had been in the fig leaf or whatever the hell it was for hours, and I was just throwing caution to the wind."

After the success Reynolds has been having—he played a skeez in "Adventureland" and a sweet dad in "Definitely, Maybe"—the 32-year-old can afford to do just that. Not only is he married to Scarlett Johansson, but Reynolds will see his "X-Men Origins: Wolverine" character, Deadpool, spun off into yet another franchise sequel.

"It's in the works," Reynolds said. "That's about all I can really say. They're actively hatching it out, and I'm meeting with them all the time. We're constantly in contact and it's just a matter of ... what it really is. Who's the villain? Look, I'm into any role in which I get to kick Captain America in the [genitalia]."

IS BUFF ENOUGH?

When Ryan Reynolds and Sandra Bullock bump uglies in "The Proposal," it may be the first time audiences see Bullock in the buff on screen.

She was nude in 1993's "Fire on the Amazon," but it's doubtful anyone actually saw that film. Without a hit since 2000's "Miss Congeniality," Bullock could be playing the skin game to reboot her career. (It's a sad statement to make, but Hollywood is a sexist system.) She could wind up like Marisa Tomei, hotter than ever after going nude, or Meg Ryan, whom nobody cared to see naked. Or somewhere in-between, like these nudie breakouts and breakdowns. ST. PETERSBURG TIMES

Jennifer Aniston*"The Break-Up":

Just a dropped towel on her way to a shower, but ever-adorable Jen displayed two more cheeks worth pinching.

Meg Ryan

"In the Cut": Ryan ran out of scripts that Tom Hanks would share, and her subsequent movies were D.O.A. in theaters. So was this kinky thriller.

Halle Berry

"Swordfish": She had earned respect for her acting chops, but flashing her breasts in a bad movie made Berry a star. "You know, I did that gratuitous scene and I knew it was gratuitous," she told a reporter last year. "And I did it because I needed to do it."

Natalie Portman

"Hotel Chevalier": It's a short film attached to "The Darjeeling Limited," and seeing Queen Amidala in the buff probably sold half of the tickets to "Star Wars" geeks.

Marisa Tomei*"Before the Devil Knows You're Dead":

An Oscar jump-started her career, but Phase 2 began with Tomei's jaw-dropping introduction in this crime yarn. Or did you think "The Wrestler" was her first dive into the nudie pool?

Amanda Peet

"The Whole Nine Yards": Peet spent most of the final reel totally starkers, as a hitwoman so focused she wouldn't get dressed. Seldom has so much been shown with so little career boost in return.

QUICK PICKS

Year One (PG-13)

Who's in it: Jack Black, Michael Cera, David Cross and Hank Azaria

What it's about: After being banished from their Neanderthal village, hunter Zed (Black) and gatherer Oh (Cera) set off on a road trip that takes them across the desert to a series of biblical settings.

Worth watching? "A few amusing moments and gags pop up here and there, but more often the script feels flat, with a needlessly heavy reliance on scatological jokes." CHRISTY LEMIRE, AP

Food, Inc. (PG)

What it's about: Director Robert Kenner and authors Eric Schlosser and Michael Pollan investigate the mechanisms behind the U.S. food industry.

Worth watching? "Robert Kenner's intellectually nourishing documentary asks us to look critically at what we're being fed and think twice before swallowing ... 'Food, Inc.' tackles a vast problem, but sends us home with glimmers of hope." COLIN COVERT, MINNEAPOLIS STAR TRIBUNE

Seraphine (NOT RATED)

Who's in it: Yolande Moreaum, Ulrich Tukur, Anne Bennent, Genevieve Mnich

What it's about: The early 20th Century self-taught mystic painter Seraphine Louis (Moreaum) was a house cleaner and laundress who spent the last decade of her life in an asylum.

Worth watching? "It is an actors' showcase, without being showy." MICHAEL PHILLIPS, TRIBUNE

Tetro
(NOT RATED)

'Tetro' makes family secrets engrossing

Benjamin (Emile Hirsch look-alike Alden Ehrenreich) is excited to reunite in Argentina with his brother, Angelo (Vincent Gallo), who has shut himself off emotionally, has no interest in acknowledging his family and now goes by the name Tetro. While living with Tetro and his girlfriend, Miranda (Maribel Verdu), 17-year-old Benjamin gradually discovers the connection between his brother's estrangement, their famous conductor father's ego and a host of family tragedies and secrets.

The verdict: Writing, romance, music, passion, theater, love. Writer-director Francis Ford Coppola's adoring eye for the intense artistry within the mostly black-and-white "Tetro" causes him to overlook certain details, such as how Miranda fell for Tetro while he was institutionalized. The film also dovetails into melodrama that nearly turns tragedy into farce. Before then, this heavily cinematic and nostalgic tale of family bonds and rivalries is equally engrossing and moving. MATT PAIS IS THE METROMIX MOVIES PRODUCER

THE TAKING OF PELHAM 123

@anison: Like a hostage thriller written by a 5 year old. Every time you expect a plot twist there isn't one.

@vaughnchicago: The Taking of Pelham 123 was o.k., but not as good as the original film. The Travolta/Washington characters were nothing new.

THE HANGOVER

@kristijoklemm: Hangover= Awesome. Good story line. Good mix of banter, physical humor and wit. Best movie this year. Zach Galifianakis FTW!
@hzomayah: The Hangover - Hilariousity. Not a particularly verbose review, but truthful nonetheless.

UP

@salkken: Up is a moving tale of love, loss and adventure that adults and children can enjoy on multiple levels. Another Pixar triumph.
@caitlinbotsios: Up, it made me laugh, made cry. I left feeling like a little kid. Disney Pixar continues to create sheer bliss on the screen

@JadeBelly dancer: Just saw this weekend - WOW! G8t story line - cool action scenes - made u want 2 watch it again!

OTHER FLICKS

@Cubsua: My Life in Ruins - makes you want to board a plane and getaway, another great story by Vardalos. Full of laughs!

The man on the moon

Rockwell
SONY PICTURES
CLASSICS

Associated Press

Fans of Sam Rockwell have often had to resort to limited glimpses of him in supporting, character-actor roles. In his new film, "Moon," that's far from a concern.

Rockwell is very nearly the only actor in "Moon." And there's more than one of him.

He plays astronaut Sam Bell, who's living alone on the far side of the moon, finishing his three-year contract harvesting lunar rock for energy on Earth. When Bell's health begins deteriorating, he starts seeing a younger version of himself around the base.

That the movie is a showcase for the 40-year-old is somewhat intentional: For his first film, Duncan Jones wrote the part specifically for the actor, designing an "acting challenge" meant to be too intriguing for Rockwell to turn down.

"I just thought it was sacrilegious that there weren't more roles where he was the leading man," said Jones, the son of David Bowie.

Rockwell said his impulse for portraying characters on the margins comes from the '70s cinema of alienation—movies like "Taxi Driver" and "Midnight Cowboy."

"Those films are just constantly coming back to me," Rockwell said. "That's just the reason I act, is to sort of recreate those films in my mind, to do my own version of that."

Trying to get into the heads of the various Sam Bells in "Moon," Rockwell says, was

|||| Moon (R)

“The film has intelligence. It has Sam Rockwell ... But 'Moon' is boring. Agonizingly, deadeningly, coma-inducingly, they-could-bury-you-alive-accidentally boring.” MICK LASALLE, SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

“like a Rubik's Cube for actors. ... a fascinating Freudian game to play on yourself.”

He was often acting only with a tennis ball or a piece of tape, small signifiers marking where the other Sam Bell would be. The maneuvering meant there was only so much room for improvising, but Rockwell would find “small windows” where he could insert a line, so long as his timing was right.

He considers “Moon” one of a handful of films—along with “Confessions of a Dangerous Mind” and “Snow Angels”—where he had “a growth spurt creatively.”

He's also about to make a growth spurt commercially, co-starring in the “Iron Man” sequel, in which he plays Justin Hammer, the industrialist rival of Tony Stark.

Rockwell said he received the script only a week before shooting, so he “kind of took it on faith.”

“It's not dissimilar to other studio movies, but the thing that's different about it is [director Jon Favreau] really likes to improvise,” Rockwell said. “So we get to play more on this movie than you would on a lot of studio movies.”

8 p.m. Sundays, WTTW-11

This new series of films based on Agatha Christie's stories are as familiar and welcoming as a warm blanket. It opens with David Suchet once again donning Poirot's fussy mustache in the first two tales. In "Cat Among the Pigeons," the ace detective must solve murders and a case of international espionage at an exclusive girls' boarding school. It's very formulaic, but nothing is more thrilling than watching Poirot gather the suspects and methodically eliminate each until the case is solved. Starting July 5, Julia McKenzie takes over the role of Miss Marple as the sharp-eyed spinster solves four equally enthralling murders. CURT WAGNER, REDEYE

These gold, door-knocker size earrings look like they could have been unearthed at a flea market somewhere in India. But for less than $100, they're much easier on the wallet than a plane ticket. From costume jewelry extraordinaire R.J. Graziano, they will make quite the statement. JOANNA GUSTAFSON FOR REDEYE

Lauren Conrad, the former star of "The Hills," isn't through with reality TV. In her debut novel she writes about a young woman named Jane, who heads out to L.A. to start an internship ... and becomes reality TV's hottest star. A thinly veiled roman a clef about people who are really thin? "There are things Jane says that I sometimes wish I had the nerve to say out loud," Conrad said in an e-mail exchange. ROBERT KAHN, NEWSDAY

SEXY TALK
FROM GINA B.,
STEPHEN
MARKLEY AND JASON STEELE

ritaredeye
@tribune.com

THE SETUP: Jada Pinkett-Smith this week told Redbook that she and hubby Will keep their sex life spicy by having quickies in the bathroom, guest bedrooms and even at their friends' houses.

Are any places off-limits for sex if it means keeping your relationship healthy?

Spice it up but be respectful

An interesting sex life is important, and I think that most places would be OK to have sex as long as the players are respectful and keep it private. It's great if they want to have sex in each room of their own home, or the garage, broom closet or even on their backyard trampoline. Anything goes. However, they should probably set some rules about having sex at friends' houses. Overnight guest sex is OK. Dinner party sex is likely frowned upon by the host and other guests within earshot. It's nice if my friends have vibrant sex lives, but I don't want firsthand knowledge. If I caught my guests sneaking a quickie in my bedroom, I would be reluctant to include them on a future guest list. THE GINA SPOT COLUMNIST GINA B IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

Passion won't last—laughs will

Sure, the risky quickie in a bizarre location sounds great, but it works a lot better if you're having sex with Will Smith or Jada Pinkett-Smith. If you're not—say if you're having sex with one of us normal-looking folk who didn't play Muhammad Ali in a movie—I'd bet that no amount of bathroom sex is ever going to really keep things "spicy." You could have sex on the event horizon of a black hole, but if it's the same person you've had sex with 10,000 times in a bed, it'll still feel more like "10,001 sex" than "event-horizon sex." This is why you must absolutely marry/be in a relationship with someone who is funny and cool and nice, because all sexual passion has a half life. No matter how freak-nasty the sex is now, it will decay and degrade, and pretty soon your friends won't invite you to dinner parties because you keep doing it on their sink. OFF THE MARKLEY BLOGGER STEPHEN MARKLEY IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

Be discreet about hitting the sheets

Quick-and-dirties can be fun so long as they don't involve anything that might get you in trouble. That means no doing it in your office elevator, the bushes outside the library or the penguin house at the zoo. Sneaking off to do it in crazy places may spice up your sex life but also can lead to trouble. You don't want to ruin your book club by excusing yourselves to the laundry room for 15 minutes, or lose friends because you had to do it in their bedroom while at their kid's first birthday party. If the well-being of your relationship hinges on having sex in increasingly risqué places, then maybe you need to join a swinger's club or see a counselor. Otherwise, have fun but be discreet.

Actor Johnny Depp walks the red carpet Thursday at a preview screening of "Public Enemies" at AMC River East 21 downtown. ABEL URIBE/TRIBUNE PHOTOS

GANGSTER'S PARADISE

Chicago Tribune

OMJ! Johnny Depp sighting!

The A-list heartthrob can always be counted on to attract a crowd, and Thursday's Chicago premiere of "Public Enemies" was no exception.

A mob of about 600—a few of whom arrived as early as 9:30 a.m.—waited across from the AMC River East 21 on East Illinois Street downtown to get a glimpse of Depp, standing less than 4 miles from the Lincoln Park theater where the character he plays—notorious bank robber John Dillinger—was gunned down.

Depp walked the red carpet Thursday with fellow "Public Enemies" stars Christian Bale and Marion Cotillard and director and Humboldt Park native Michael Mann.

Depp was the last of the cast to arrive to the red carpet, greeted with high-pitched screaming. The actor signed autographs for fans after speaking with the media.

"It's nice to be able to come back here and say 'thank you,'" said Depp, who last year spent time in Chicago filming the movie, which opens July 1.

Mann told RedEye that growing up in Chicago gave him an advantage in directing the movie.

"I had a sense of what things looked like," he said. "My parents were alive in that period."

Asked who is the bigger Illinois crook, Dillinger or former Gov. Rod Blagojevich, Mann quipped: "Put it this way: Dillinger was an honest outlaw. He really went in there and he took the money. That's a lot different than pretending you're something else."

Co-star Cotillard had been to Chicago only once before filming "Enemies," she said.

What did she know about Chicago while growing up in France?

"The gangsters," she said. "It was the only thing I knew." METROMIX'S MATT PAIS CONTRIBUTED.

Calling celebri-stalkers

Have you seen any famous people yet? There are a bunch in the city over the next few days besides the "Public Enemies" cast. Still on the TBS Just For Laughs fest schedule—and presumably due in the Chicago area at some point—are George Lopez, Lisa Lampanelli and Jimmy Fallon, to name a few. Keep your eyes and ears open, and if you spot a celeb or snap a pic, let us know. Happy hunting!

Ole! Bruno!

Sacha Baron Cohen strikes again, this time as a bull. Baron Cohen, in character as gay fashionista reporter Bruno, appeared as a bull in front of Spain's main bull-ringing Thursday, the AP reports. He arrived in a horse-drawn carriage escorted by matadors. It's the latest stunt for Baron Cohen as his outrageous character as he promotes "Bruno," which is set for release July 10. "Ich have come to redress the wrong done to the gay community by that Hollywood movie on Harvey Milk which was acted by Sean Penn, who's not even gay," Baron Cohen told a crowd of bemused Madrid onlookers in an accent.

Staying alive

In case you're still watching, on Thursday's "I'm a Celebrity ... Get Me Out of Here!" foul-mouthed Janice Dickinson was sent packing and the relationship of Sanjoly (Sanjaya Malakar and Holly Montag) came to an end before it even started with Montag getting the ax. Malakar, John Salley, Lou Diamond Phillips, Stephen Baldwin, Torrie Wilson and Chicago's own Patti Blagojevich (left) remain, battling it out for king or queen of the jungle on the NBC reality show.

Crank call?

"To be perfectly honest, I wasn't on the other line of that call," she said on "The View" on Thursday. "So I didn't even know about it until ... so, no, I didn't get an apology. He's lying."
